“When you can sacrifice your needs and wants for those you love even when circumstances are fraught,

When you can provide those items in life that have never been able to be bought;

When you can go through your day of troubles and turmoil but still provide a smile,

When you take those you love to events and activities regardless of the mile;

When you can run to the danger and protect others without thought of ego or self,

When you can offer your personal ambitions and place them on a shelf;

When you can impose your will and rules simply with a look,

When you can overcome challenges that wouldn't seem realistic if written in a book;

When you can hear words of hurt from those you love and not have a qualm,

Yours is the wellspring of love in all existence and you'll forever be Mom.”
